EXEMPT MINIMUM SALARY INCREASED

The long-anticipated amendment to the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) was issued on May 18, 2016 increasing the minimum salary to $47,476 per year for employees to qualify for overtime exemption under the "white collar" exemptions (Executive, Administrative, and Professional Exemptions). The new salary threshold will go into effect on December 1, 2016. This change imposes a higher threshold for employers under federal law than currently exists under California law.

The FLSA Overtime Rule At-A-Glance:

- The rule extends overtime protections to 4.2 million workers who are not currently eligible under federal law

NECA LAUNCHES NEW NECA BOOK APP

Designed to enhance networking opportunities between members, chapter and national staff, the NECA Book app offers easy-to-use search features that pull from the most current data, keeping members constantly updated. The free app is now available for all devices in the iTunes and Google Play stores. Learn more by clicking here.

To Benefit... Participate!

- Workers who earn as much as $913 a week ($47,476 annually) will have to be paid overtime even if they are classified as a manager or professional
- Employers must comply with the new regulations by December 1, 2016
- The DOL will automatically increase the salary threshold every three years. Based on current projections, the salary threshold is expected to rise to more than $51,000 with its first update on January 1, 2020.

Despite early predictions, the final rule does not make any changes to the duties test for executive, administrative and professional employees.

Options for Employers to Comply With Rule:

- Reclassify exempt employees to hourly and cap their hours to 40 per week;
- Raise workers' salaries to at or above the new threshold to retain the exemption or;
- A combination of the above.

Cracking the 'WIP' - Driving Predictable Cost Projections

Many contractors struggle with how to build a robust cost projection process that provides for consistency and predictability; banks and bonding companies are demanding contractors develop and implement robust cost controls. Learn how to identify the key indicators that monitor project performance and allow you to drive responsibility to the project level, affecting the greatest positive change.

- Identify how to manage work-in-process for better profitability;
- Explain the relationship between project profitability and processes;
- Describe how to apply earned value reporting to projects;
- Describe key performance metrics that create actionable information;
- Discuss data collection and metric automation methods;
- Explain deployment options.

Senior executives, financial managers and project managers will benefit from this full-day course.
